On July 7, 2025, an order was issued by the court in two cases before the Michigan Court of Claims in Home Builders Assoc et al. v LARA et al. The order temporarily prevents LARA from "taking additional steps necessary to apply or implement" two rule sets that would update the Michigan Residential Code and residential Energy Code chapter while the litigation remains ongoing. Both rule sets would adopt, in part, the 2021 International Residential Code (IRC) and 2021 International Energy Conservation Code (IECC) residential standards and were set to become effective on August 29, 2025.

While this stipulated order remains in place, the 2015 versions of the IRC and residential provisions of the IECC standards currently adopted, in part, by each rule set will remain valid and in effect. You may review the draft revisions to each rule set and a complete copy of the court's stipulated order by visiting each link below and clicking on "Final Rule Language":
